Regaining hope, strength and livelihood

With little education, odd-job worker Chen Ling Fatt was his family's sole breadwinner.

After a stroke, he couldn't walk without help or talk without slurring. Even smiling was hard. He wondered what would happen if he never regained his strength and mobility. What would happen to him and his loved ones?

Ling Fatt received rehabilitation care at St Luke's Hospital. Recognising the importance of family involvement, his therapists built rapport with his son, Joshua, involving the son in his father's therapy efforts.

Within two weeks, Ling Fatt could walk by himself and even greeted his nurses and therapists with a big smile.

He is thankful to the hospital for helping him pay for his medical bills and transport when he needs to go for medical appointments.

Stroke survivor Chen Ling Fatt (right) and his son Joshua. Ling Fatt regained his ability to walk and smile at St Luke's Hospital.

He said in Mandarin: "If not for the help from the hospital, I would have no money to see the doctor and have a chance to recover, let alone go back to work and provide for my family."

St Luke's Hospital cares for the whole person, recognising people have more than just physical needs. They also have emotional and psychosocial needs. As a charity hospital, most of our patients are lower income. They may have cancer, pneumonia, dementia, stroke, fractures and may have undergone surgery and amputation.

Your giving helps:

1. Care for the whole person in every ward, including dedicated dementia, palliative and wound wards, and rehabilitation gyms.
2. Provide financial assistance to patients who need medical care, home modifications and transport.
3. Improve access to community healthcare through community clinic and home care services.

St Luke's Hospital cares for 2,000 inpatients and 2,000 outpatients each year. Join us in our mission of enriching lives.

Give to St Luke's Hospital, give hope to patients. Visit slh.org.sg/give for more ways to help patients.
