Giving strength and hope

When “circuit breaker” started and loved ones could no longer visit patients, we started “Good Morning, St Luke’s” to emotionally support patients and lift their spirits. This “radio programme” broadcast on the hospital’s public announcement system encouraged patients through inspirational messages by hospital staff and guests. We hope to also share these messages with you.

Some of the guests on the programme have been through tough times and hope to encourage others. One of them is Koh Yock Kim, an ex-patient of the hospital. She wanted to let patients who were away from their families know “many people are there for them”. Here is her story.

Koh Yock Kim was walking back to her hospital bed when she suddenly felt faint. She grabbed paper and pen, scribbled “oxygen” and pressed the emergency call bell before losing consciousness. Her St Luke’s Hospital nurse sprang into action and resuscitated her.

Koh Yock Kim felt blessed to be able to sit up and write again. She is penning her recovery journey into a book.

Earlier that year, Yock Kim had suffered sudden weakness when she was on a trip. She could not breathe, and had to be on a ventilator and feeding tube. After rehabilitation in the hospital, she could speak, eat without feeding tube and walk again.

Hear Yock Kim’s story and stories from more guests on Good Morning, St Luke’s.

St Luke’s Hospital cares for the whole person, recognising people have more than just physical needs. They also have emotional and psychosocial needs. As a charity hospital, most of our patients are lower income. They may have cancer, pneumonia, dementia, stroke, fractures and may have undergone surgery and amputation.

Your giving helps:

1. Care for the whole person in every ward, including dedicated dementia, palliative and wound wards, and rehabilitation gyms.
2. Provide financial assistance to patients who need medical care, home modifications and transport.
3. Improve access to community healthcare through St Luke’s Community Clinic and home care.

St Luke’s Hospital cares for 2,000 inpatients and 3,000 outpatients each year.

Give to St Luke’s Hospital, give hope to patients. Visit slh.org.sg/give for more ways to help.
